

Gentlemen, it is with the most unfeigned submission I present myself to your Notice, most humbly requesting your kind suffrages to return me (although unworthy) one of your representatives for the great City of Westminster, and which I consider whom I succeed. I cannot but sincerely deplore his loss, but much more so my inadequacy to fill his place, and can only most solemnly promise to exert the utmost of my poor abilities to keep my place.

HUMILITY or the Canvassing Candidate

Electors, I feel a satisfaction in my own bosom (which I cannot refrain from expressing,) that my transcendent Merit fully entitles me to be chosen your representative, and that you have barely done yourselves justice in returning me, why you must have been cursed fools if you had not done so. I shall not think it worth my while to answer them. Why the fellows say I am in bad the officer, I don't pay my Debt into Parliament for, those measures since which I see strongly out of Office, how why should I care all my life to be so.

I get drunk one half the day, & I don't choose to answer that, they say Fools: what did I want to get Dreg any I have never signed I have been in administration declared necessary while shows their Ignorance. propose reform now Friends have got
